

News of Petersburg

Times-Dispatch Bureau,
109 North Sycamore Street,
Petersburg, Va., October 19.

The Sunday school of the High Street Methodist Episcopal Church is the largest, and, it may be said, one of the most progressive in the city. Yesterday's school held its annual rally, which was the most successful in its history, with two special services in the morning and the third at night and a very interesting program on each occasion. At the 9 o'clock service every scholar of the fifteen classes in the main room was present, and all seemed to enjoy the excellent program rendered, consisting of recitations, solos by members of the school, and a short talk by Mr. L. T. McIntosh, secretary of the International Sunday School Association of Virginia. In the large Phoenix Bible classroom 164 men listened to the able exposition of the lesson by the Rev. R. P. Gill. Solos were sung by Miss Myra Mattoon and Captain William E. Beasley, and instrumental music was furnished by the class orchestra. But the most interesting feature of the hour was that furnished by the primary department, where were gathered 124 out of the 125 on the roll to greet their faithful superintendent, Mrs. Richard Bagby.

The attendance at the first service was 542 scholars and many visitors. At 11 o'clock the services were continued before an audience that filled the church. The program here was participated in by members of the school and the Phoenix Orchestra. President James B. Blanks, of the Sunday School Union Association, spoke words of greeting, and Mr. L. T. McIntosh delivered a fine address on the subject, "The Sunday School as an Educational and Evangelizing Agency."

The most impressive services of the day, however, were held at night, when the teachers of the school were publicly installed. Following an address by Mr. McIntosh on the "Responsibility of the Teacher," the Sunday School Teachers were called around the altar and impressively charged to be faithful to their duties. The church was again crowded, and great interest was manifest in the services.

In the afternoon a mass meeting, under the auspices of the Sunday

McAllister preached at the First Church in the morning and at the West End Church at night to large congregations.

The First gave $200 for the league, and West End also contributed liberally. It is stated that in thirteen months in Virginia the first six months of the year, the temperance forces won twelve, putting 373 bars and distilleries out of business.
